Not So Bad as She Feared.

"George," she whispered as she crept a little closer and placed her head against his left hand second story vest pocket—"George, I want to ask you a question, a very important one. Why do you allude to papa as a pirate? Surely you must have some good reason for doing so?" "I have, indeed!" responded George, with a dreamy, faraway look in his eyes. "Pirates board people, you know, and I expect your father, if my plans work all right, to eventually board me."

Looked That Way.

"S-s-sus-say, ma," stammered Bobby through the suds as his mother scrubbed him. "I guess you want to get rid o' me, don't you?" "Why, no, Bobby dear," replied his mother. "What ever put such an idea as that into your mind?" "Oh, nuthin'," replied Bobby. "Only it seems to me you're tryin' to rub me out."

As Clipped From One of Our Arizona Exchanges

A Tombstone Prospector representative, in his rambles, ran onto a place owned by Jesus Corteleon, about two miles south of the big Pilares mine in Sonora, Mexico, the other day. Corteleon owns a commissario, or 'dobe trading place, and has a rare collection of antiquities, and among them is an old heirloom in the form of a clock, a combination of brass and wood, and it has never stopped for two hundred and seventy years.

This clock is distinguished for very steadfast habits rather than speed. It has been regularly wound, but never set, and is about fourteen years behind, but every year or so it catches up through the principle of calculation and coincidence.

It does not exactly catch up, but time overtakes it and forms a junction. Corteleon would not take five burros, two goats and an Indian rubber dog for that clock.

Yearned for Old School.

He is five years old. He has a brother who is old enough to be in school and has a penchant for writing. And this brother is forever asking for a "nickel tablet," meaning, of course, a five-cent block of writing paper. That, it appears, was where he got one of the words. The other word was "tabernacle" and this came from the fact that the Tabernacle church had a Sunday school in the neighborhood. The mission and the school were abandoned after a while, to the great disappointment of the five-year-old. He wanted the old school back again. "Papa," he said, "I am tired of that old Sunday school we go to now. I wish we had one of those nickeltablet schools here again."

Strictly Business.

Inquiring Friend—You've given up booze? How did you ever summon up enough fortitude and self-denial to do that?

Budger—I paid a high-price d doctor $25 to tell me what was the matter with me, and that was his sole prescription. By George, I couldn't afford to waste all that money!
